India has an economic history of thousands of years that dates back to the Indus valley civilization. Ancient India was a rich country till foreigners plundered it for several hundred years. But it has a history of a great economy due to its trade relations with foreign countries from the Far East and to the western European countries and Africa. Ancient Economic History. India was better economically during these times and saw some of the most golden years in terms of economy. Till the 17th century, India was not totally under the rule of the British and hence it was not yet plundered by these colonial rulers. However, it still experienced some unprecedented downs in economy. Studies have revealed that the gross domestic surplus goods contributed the world's 25.1% economy. The economic history of India begins with the Indus Valley Civilisation (3300â€“1300 BCE), whose economy appears to have depended significantly on trade and examples of overseas trade. The Vedic period saw countable units of precious metal being used for exchange. The term Nishka appears in this sense in the Rigveda. Historically, India was the largest economy in the world for most of the next three millennia, starting around the 1st millennia BCE and ending around the beginning of British Raj.
